Overview

Representative Blake Moore is a conservative voice for action on climate change. He represents a conservative district and is effectively moving the Republican party to concentrate on the key issues related to climate from the perspective of traditional conservative values.

Representative Moore also supports bipartisan efforts on enduring and significant climate policy and is working to forge relationships in both parties that will lead to successful legislation. As a key member of the Conservative Climate Caucus, Representative Moore supports an approach to reducing greenhouse gas emissions that leverage America's innovative skills and entrepreneurial spirit, coming together to address climate change.

Positions on Energy and Climate

He knows that climate change affects us all and needs to be addressed. "Our environment is paramount... The long-term health and viability of our planet is a goal we all have to share"

Representative Moore favors traditionally conservative values in our national approach to addressing climate change. He supports a transition to move us to a zero carbon economy, and he prefers a technology-neutral strategy. His view is that expediting permitting for traditional and fully renewable energy sources would go a long way to reducing greenhouse gas emissions. Safe modern nuclear power can provide a zero carbon footprint that fits within our existing national energy grid.

Representative Moore's strategy also includes a reliance on private industry in addition to government leadership. By unlocking private investment and innovation, the government can rely on the proven effectiveness of the free market to lead to breakthroughs, rather than on centralized decision making.

Why we support Representative Blake Moore

Blake Moore is a pragmatic advocate within the Republican party for addressing climate change. As a member of the Conservative Climate Caucus, he works with the founder (and his fellow Utahan John Curtis) to educate his constituents, who are primarily conservative, and his colleagues on the challenges and the opportunities of the energy transition but recognizes the need to protect our economy and enhance our nation's security.

Rep Moore will have an important role to play in the passing of any climate legislation, as he serves on several committees which will surely be instrumental: the House committees on the Armed Services, on Natural Resources, and on the Budget.

Shortly after his election in 2020, he said that climate change should not be a partisan issue. He has proven that he can work across the aisle and will continue his efforts to drive a safe transition path to a low carbon future.
